

BLAMELESS: MC Biker Romance (Black Thorns, #3)

(This book can be read as a standalone, but characters from the previous books appear and situations/relationships from the first two are also referenced.) He never saw her coming. An angel doesn't belong with a devil. Nothing will ever be the same. Zeb Runner Wilkes has always been the wild playboy of Black Thorns MC. The shallow joker who spends his life partying and screwing. He never once imagined it would get tired. Until it does. When he steps in one night to protect shy diner owner, Sarah, he quickly realizes there's more to her than he gave her credit for. But this down and dirty biker doesn't do sweet and innocent. Or, so he thinks, until he gets a taste of her. Before long, he's unable to maintain his own denial. He's in trouble, because she's on his mind. He wants more than a taste. But can a man like him really have a woman like her? Sarah Hughes has been living her life in peace, running her diner in Brockford. She keeps to herself and never lets herself get mixed up with any men, not after her awful past. But when her ex finds her and starts trouble in her diner, everything changes. Her biker crush steps in like a knight in shining armor. Her ex and his business partners turn out to be enemies of Runners club and the mutual threat throws her and the sexy biker together. Runner and Sarah find what they didn't even realize they needed in each other. He gives her strength and brings out her fire. She becomes the only thing standing between him and absolute darkness. But when a blast from the past attacks Runner in the most sadistic way, their relationship is put in jeopardy. In the aftermath, he's sent into a tailspin and being pulled into his old life. Can he hold on? Can Sarah bring him back from the edge? Or will he end up losing everything: the club, Sarah and even his life?
